i. fol. 61rII–22

Prayer against poison, no rubric.¹

Scribe B minuscule, corrected and glossed in OE by Aldred.

1. Lind. says, p. 216, that “only faint traces of a rubric are visible” but I see nothing in the ms and don’t know where he thought he saw it.

2. T. J. Brown, 29, notes “erroneous” abbreviation spis, as well as oia and onis in i. 12.

3. Note “q” crossed out and corrected with a “c” above it, by Aldred using the red ink of his gloss. Note also insular majuscule for the first “s” in sanctus, but insular minuscule for the final “s” in the abbreviation (scs).

4. Note abbreviation mark above “un” of sunt.

5. Note “e” corrected with “a” above it; the “e” appears to have a dot below it to indicate correction. The added “a” is more in Scribe B’s style of “a,” square three stroke, than Aldred’s, and is in same dark thick strokes as B.

6. Aldred has added a corrected red “a” above the final “a” of uipera, perhaps because Scribe B’s “a” looks almost like a “ti.” Subsequently, Scribe B appears to have made an effort to make a more rounded two-stroke “a” like Aldred’s (evident a few times earlier, and with some reversion to his square style after). T. J. Brown, 29, notes Scribe B’s special square or rounded “a” letters, as well as his “r,” “x,” “&” and round “s” (i. 15 on initial “s” of scorpius and i. 20 on conspicu).

2. fols. 61vi–62vi

Lection benedictions (Incipiunt benedixiones ad lectionem) for Christmas, Epiphany, Easter, Ascension, Whitsun, Advent, Virgin, Peace, Trinity, Apostles, Martyrs, Confessors, and All Saints.¹⁹

Scribe C, minuscule, dark brown ink, first writing stint;²⁰ Aldred gloss only on 61vi–10.

7. The end of spileg is hard to read: the “e” of the “æ” seems to merge with “g.”

8. Other versions have quieta between rana and torpescit.

9. Note use of insular majuscule “s” in scorpius, both at beginning and end, rather than insular minuscule.

10. Other versions have Regulus between extinuitur and uincitur.

11. Note absence of insular et/ond symbol (7).

12. The initial “r” of repentia is badly formed, almost appearing like a “p.”

13. The “se” added above “r” is in Scribe B’s hand and ink. Lind. corrects to adversę. T. J. Brown, p. 29 lists a 1. 19 correction by Scribe B, but he must mean this one on 1. 18. The next word, salutis, begins with an insular majuscule rather than insular minuscule “s.”

14. Other versions have extingue between uirus and operationes.

15. Lind. has giidla, but it could also be gild although what follows is almost illegible (very small scribble, including the ðu).

16. Aldred corrects “d” to “t” by putting a dot below the “d” and adding a “t” in red.

17. Aldred crosses through the erroneous “d” in red but does not appear to add the corrected “t” above, which is glossed with his usual abbreviation “þ’te.”

18. Scribe B made the same error again, “d” for “t” in ut, with Aldred again lining out the “d.” Apparently, if Aldred was checking B as he wrote, he did so only after this reduplicating error.

19. Compare to LM A, fol. 9v–11r, items 52–96.

20. T. J. Brown, 30.

21. No label for season, but what follows first are labeled in LM A as ad lectorem de natale domini.22. Aldred uses the dæg rune abbreviation throughout: M23. Initial “h” added above “o” of odierna, in red by Aldred with gloss.

24. LM A 52, p. 16.

25. The word gibloedsia breaks at the “o” to go around the “amen,” with “ed” and then “sia” below it.

26. Here and for the next six lines, Scribe C has had difficulty fitting the blessing on one line, either adding the amen above the last word or squeezing it on the right, now in the gutter of the binding.

27. LM A 53 p. 16.

28. LM A 54 p. 16.

29. Aldred? correction in brown, adding “hu” in front of and above “mani” to make humani.30. LM A 59, p. 17 has dilectionis.31. For terrīs (ligature “er”).32. LM A has dignatus est ex utero virginis.

33. The abbreviated “-costen” written above and into the gutter.

34. LM A item 67 has delictorum.

35. Erasure of one or two characters between maiesta and final “s.”

36. This line’s prayer and the next are reversed in LM A, items 76 and 75.

37. This line’s prayer and next are reversed in LM A, items 82 and 81.

38. Unlabeled here but labeled in LM (before item 87) as commendationes post nocturnos.

39. Lind. has geneticę, but the ms has an “x” with dots above and below to indicate error.

Blessing of (Font), Milk and Honey,⁴⁵ with interpolated cross prayer (3a, 62v22–63r20).⁴⁶

Scribe C, minuscule, light brown ink, second stint; relatively few abbreviations.

No gloss, but heavily corrected by Aldred in the area of the cross prayer (3a).

62v

41. Unlabeled here but labeled in LM A (before item 93) de confessoribus but that is clear from the text of the prayer.

42. In LM A (item 94) a malis is the end of the previous prayer and the second prayer (item 95) begins with Cunctis.

43. The same hand, apparently, added “i” above second “u” of cunctus with a dot under it to indicate correction.

44. Absent from LM.

45. Parallel text in LM A, item 2401 (see Orchard, vol. 1, 89–91); Ratoldus 1063, and the Egbert Pontifical, p. 137. Three unidentified passages in this sequence are 62v22–25, 63r16–20 and 63r26–63v4.

46. Only partially identified (63r1–15, see below).

47. Erasure after “f” of fonte, looks like an “r” (e.g., fronte).

48. LM A has perenni qui es.

49. LM A 2401 p. 416 continues from here with the milk and honey blessing, unlike this switch to a cross prayer.

50. The “as” added as correction in front of tutias in margin, seems to be different hand and ink/nib, probably Aldred (T. J. Brown, 29).

51. For a similar text to 63rr-15, see RGP, vol. 1, items 100-101, pp. 158-59 and PL 138: 1030c.

52. The “am” erased, “s” inserted above “i” by Aldred (T. J. Brown, 29).

53. Abbreviated “sig +” added above “am” erasure by Aldred (T. J. Brown, 29).

54. Cross inserted in corrector’s hand.

55. The “-os” added by Aldred.

56. The “o” added above “u” to make inimicos, by Aldred.

57. Added by Aldred above erasure of three or four characters, perhaps part of inmundi (the final “i” looks altered). Last erased letter has descender (s?).

58. The “-cti” is a correction above erasure of “ixi,” by Aldred.

59. The “in” added by Aldred.

60. The “re” added above “s” by Aldred, two dots above and below “o” somewhat angled.

61. The space before and after seu gives the appearance of erasure; the “s” of seu may be the hand of Aldred.

62. The “o” added above “a” with a possible dot below the “a,” correction by Aldred?

63. Misspelling for splendoris; see also 63v1 below.

64. The “u” with macron abbreviation mark above it appears to be a correction over an “a;” there appears to be an erased “s” after that.

65. The “f” of feruoris is written over some other letter by Aldred; in front of it appears to be an erased letter, possibly a “u.”66. Large T descending below the line. Repetition of Tu enim domine from 62v22 signals return to milk and honey blessing as found in the comparable texts.

67. LM A does not include Jacob, while Ratoldus does.

68. Departure from LM A.

69. Cannot see in facsimile, relying on Lind.

70. The phrase iunge . . . sancto appears similar to LM A Coniuge domine famulos tuos spiritui sancto . . .; see also Ratoldus 1063 and RGP 2:410.71. On “ducatum” Lind. has ducatu but I see an abbreviation mark above the “u.”72. Lind. corrects to splendoris; see also 63v15–16 above.73. The phrase in 63r26–63v4, lac et mel . . . commedit, is not present in LM A, but the ending per quam hæc omnia domine is in LM A.74. Compare LM A 2404 and Fulda 1168, which both have uuae where Scribe D’s has une (line 6). Ratoldus 1066 is nearly identical, but does not have uuae in the first sentence. See also Franz 1:372.

75. Title illegible, very light brown, possibly erased or a different ink. Lind, 217, refers to Wanley’s read-

6 Benedic domine et hos fructus nouos unæ quos

Scribe D, majuscule and minuscule; no gloss.

63v

19 //nucleosque et omnem fructum

ing of Benedictio panis frumen. As this is a blessing of grapes (uva), not bread, the title is confusing because Scribe D has misread uuæ and written unæ; the next item for bread lacks a title.

76. See LM A 2403 for lines 12–13 and 2408 for et duos pisces . . . digneris; see also the original Durham Collectar benedictio panis on fol. 47r (Corrèa 594, p. 214) which is the same as lines 12–13 and lines 15 from ut sit through line 18 per, comparable to LM A 2403; Franz I:268; see also CCCC 422 (Red Book of Darley), p. 295.

77. Seems to be something missing, at least one letter, in front of this, but no sign of erasure, apparently an error for benedic. There may be a title on the half line above (11).

78. Scribe D's “u” and “n” often appear as two minims without a bottom or top connector, line 12 nouam, line 13 in, line 14 “.u.” for a number.

79. After deserto is some space at the end of the line, possibly an erasure.

80. This per te . . . sæcula sæculum [sic, sæculorum] is found in LM A 2406, the blessing of fruit that Scribe D copies next but does not include the line there (see below, 63v23).

81. LM A 2406; Franz I: 379 (#7).

8. fol. 64r–17

Generic prayers

Scribe E, large hand, widely spaced, probably here first before the work of C and D; no gloss.

82. The “t” of et is unclear, only a minim close to “n” of nuces.

83. The end of the line wraps above to line 19 in the space left after the previous prayer.

84. This is a different ending than found in LM A (cf. 63v18–19 above) and appears to be disconnected from this prayer, which he has already ended with the abbreviation per on the previous line.

85. LM A 2414; Ratoldus 192; Fulda 2790.

86. Letter forms on 64r seem sharper, are smaller, less space between lines, possibly because Scribe E’s text below was already there.

87. Lind. has ad cumunem, omitting the extra cu, which appears to have some faint marks or partially erased letters over it. Leofric 2414 reads communem.88. Lind. expands to uestram, but LM has uitam here. Scribe D error, urā for uitā?89. Lind. has ut tibi but there is no evidence of a “-bi” or abbreviation mark.90. Corrector has added above the middle of agereatur an insertion mark and “mere” to correct to agere mereatur. LM 2414 has agere mereatur. I wonder if the scribe blended the two words together. Ratoldus and Fulda are the same as LM.

91. Milfull, The Hymns of the Anglo-Saxon Church, 278–81 and 57–58.

92. T. J. Brown, p. 30, calls it a “most imposing” majuscule.

93. Added by modern hand in upper margin, same as hand on fol. 53v, noted below.

94. The reverse, morte mortem, is standard in other manuscripts of Hy 68; both Scribes C and E have this order (see below, fol. 53v5).

95. Inserted correction, possibly different nib, perhaps in his minuscule hand.

96. Milfull collation, p. 279, ends with Presta, beata trinitas, while H has Presta pater per filium. Only Durham scribes E and C have this longer doxology.

10. fols. 64vi7–65rb17

Lection Responsories, Versicles, and Antiphons for Tobit, Judith, Macca-bees, Minor Prophets

97. Amen added by another hand; see Milfull, Hymns, 280.

98. Modern hand, same as the one who added Auctor above the hymn fol. 64v, recopied Auctor here as well as the first word of the next line, inlitus (for inclusus). Prior damage in the corner may have washed out the letters.

99. Erasure here of one or two characters.

100. The “q:” for que inserted possibly by Scribe E, although the letter and the insertion caret mark below and between uitam and uita appears to be a browner ink; Milfull suggests another hand for both.

101. Erasure cracked the middle of the page; scribe E worked around it.

102. Messy erasure here; “cr” visible on left and “cis” on right.

103. The word “cognomine” perhaps is split to work around a rough spot above a white patch in the ms right below “-mine.” The white patch is only visible on the verso and appears to be over the palimpsest, not under it. Looks papery, perhaps glued on after the erasure caused some damage. As it turns out, Scribe E did not write over it since the text ends above it.

Scribe F; 3 columns 64v17–28, 2 columns fol. 65r;¹⁰⁴ no gloss; rubricated titles and margin letters (R, V, A) oxidized.

¹⁰⁴. Columns do not line up so numbering is specific to each column (a, b, c or a, b); 65rb ends half way at line 17. Fol. 64 bottom left edge torn away and patched with light colored, thin material similar to several other patches. The patch is glued to the recto side. Although it looks like Scribe F started his first column to the right of the patch (his text does line up with the text above), the rubrics are very close to the edge and damaged.

113. Milfull, Hymns, 238–41: Lent hymn at Vesper weekdays according to some manuscript traditions.

114. T. J. Brown, 30.

115. Phrase vel virium added by another hand above cordium. Other ms (Milfull, Hymns, pp. 240–41) have virium. The cordium may be an eye skip repetition from cordium in the previous line.

116. Possible erasure of one character after quide with some damage to the “e;” see Milfull, Hymns, 240.

Passiontide Hymn(s) Vexilla Regis (12a, 65vi–8; Hy 67₁) and Arbor decora (12b, 65v9–16; Hy 67₂)¹¹⁹

Scribe C, continuation of stint 4, minuscule from 65vi;¹²⁰ no gloss; title in top margin ymnus infra quadragesima possibly added by another hand.

117. The ending -bria added by another hand into margin, now very faint, especially “ia” (hard to know whether the “a” had a macron to indicate sobriam, which one manuscript has).

118. Last letters after tu- illegible. Lind. has tua, other manuscripts in Milfull have tuis, but the line in her collated edition uses a different base text, with the line reading ut sint acceptablia.

119. Milfull, Hymns, 274–78. Some hymnals divide Hy 67, Venantius Fortunatus’s Vexilla Regis, between Vespers and Matins at Passiontide, but one ms assigns the whole to Vespers; the second part (Arbor decora) assigned to Matins, although one ms (Harley 2961) has it at Lauds for Invention and Exaltation of the Cross. Durham A.IV.19 treats as two separate hymns with line break and capital letter, although no “amen” is included at 65v8 to conclude the first half of the hymn.

120. T. J. Brown, 30.

121. Top margin, possibly different hand (Milfull, Hymns, 276).

122. Milfull, Hymns, 276, variants include fulgent and fulget; only Durham has fulge.

123. Milfull, Hymns, 276, variants include vulneratur and vulneratus; only Durham has vulnneratus.

124. Correction with vel added above concinit, Scribe C hand probably. Milfull notes variants (Hymns, 276), main text is cecinit, but three mss have concinit.

125. Milfull, Hymns, 277–78, electa in other mss.

126. Space between letters “d” and “i.” Milfull, Hymns, 277–78, other mss have fundens or fundis; Milfull notes possible erasure in Durham, between “d” and “i.” It appears to be a square or round letter with no ascenders or descenders.

127. Some erasure here on the end of fertili; Milfull says “l” altered from “i” (or vice versa since it looks like a second “l” with an erasure in the middle). Also, “t” has a tail into the left margin.

128. Milfull, Hymns, 286, notes its use in Vespers at Eastertide.

129. Initial “A” looks like a “U,” top extenders curl outward without connection across the top.

130. Milfull, Hymns, 284, 286, other mss Christus.

131. Milfull, Hymns, 285–86, other mss fracta.

132. Milfull, Hymns, 285, 287, other mss redempta without est.

13. This concluding line is centered and seems to indicate completion of the set.

14. Same prayer in original collectar, fol. 59vi–i3, glossed by Aldred; Corrêa item 653, p. 233; LM A 2689; Deshusses 1455, pp. 474–75.

15. Left margin, vertical dry point ruling clearly visible (white).

16. Lind. has a cross; hard to see due to staining in upper left corner that extends down the margin this far. Title in red(?), heavily oxidized; clearly a different (metallic?) ink than the red of Aldred's field prayers right above, which is not oxidized.

17. Fading or erasure after "or" with space before "dns." Some stray letter marks above the "or" and the space to the right. I am guessing a standard abbreviation, oremus rather than oratio for the abbreviation mark in part because it fits with the next phrase, e.g., "let us pray," and "the Lord be with you."

18. Decorated capital D extending down a line; red, same as title, but not oxidized on this side.

19. Insertion of ac by a different hand: the "a" looks different from Scribe C's style, though the ink is similar.

20. Rubricated title; unglossed. Two arms with hands in the bottom right corner appear to embrace or point upward to the end of the line.

21. End of line hard to read in the gutter, but "lic" appears below the end of the word.

22. Relying on Lind. reading of damaged corner; inuictae supplied from other versions.

23. Other versions supply imperii here.

24. Above, but no alternate word visible.

25. Goes into margin and below, relying on Lind. reading.

26. The "nis" is written below.

Differences in 66v from fol. 59v:²⁷

- Title on fol. 59r21 “benedictio sal et aqua hic mittat sal in aquā.” Title in LM A 2689 is Hic mittatur sal in aqua, benedictio pariter.
 Line 11 above “se primis” is “reprimis” on fol. 59r3
 Line 12 quo is qui on fol. 59r4; LM A 2689 is qui
 Line 13 [ex]pugnas is expugnans on fol. 59r5; LM A 2689 is expugnas
 Line 13 suplices is spelled suplices on fol. 59r6
 Line 14 ut hanc creaturam is ut creaturam on fol. 59r6 but LM A 2689 has hanc
 Line 18 [in]uocationem sancti tui nominis, no sancti on fol. 59r9; LM A 2689 has tui sancti nominis
 Last line of fol. 59r12 has per dominum nostrum iesum.

27. Some of the differences in 66v could be errors while copying from 59r, such as se primis, qui, suplices. But LM similarities suggest that Scribe C at fol. 66v had another exemplar instead of or besides fol. 59r, such as the expugnas, hanc, and sancti.

28. Found in original collectar, fol. 59v14–18 (Corrêa 654). Four differences: third word domine; mittere with two “t’s”; sanctum in angelum tuum sanctum de celis; per dominum at end. See also Deshusses 1456, p. 475.

29. Large decorated E but faint and oxidized.

30. Stain in corner, damaging qui and et def- on next line.

31. Blotch or stain on -tet.

Additions to house blessing

32. Title in red, faint, some oxidization.

33. Found in original collectar, fol. 47v12–17 (Corrêa 597) and fols. 59v19–60r3 (Corrêa 655). Three differences in 597: benedictio versus benedixio spelling of fol. 68; missing in from phrase ut in his manufactis in other two; has tutum in last phrase ipsi [tuum] semper. Three differences in 655: 2nd word nobis; spelling of benedictio (but cannot verify because of stain); no tuum as in fol. 68r6 or tutum as in 597. See also Deshusses 1457, p. 475.

34. Large red initial A, extending down a line.

35. Found in original collectar, fol. 60r4–7 (Corrêa 656). Three differences: third word domine; extra phrase instead of ut si qua sunt contraria has ut si qua sunt aduersa si qua contraria; in domo famuli tui does not have alternate in hac domo famulorum tuorum. uel famulii tui. See also Deshusses 1458, p. 475.

36. Initial EX, oxidized, extending down a line.

37. Red alia here at the end of 68r7 and also end of 68r10 both faint.

38. Found in original collectar, fol. 47v18–23 (Corrêa 598). Five differences: second word domine; no sanctitas as in line 12 (fol. 47v phrase in eo sanitas et casti- is an insert in line above); has et between uirtus and uictoria; hec semper instead of adsit in line 15; has permaneat as last word after in eo but it is written below as an addition by someone else, probably by the M₃ marginal scribe.

39. Initial decorative B, extending down a line.

40. There appears to be a small “i” added above the “u” of hunc, possibly different nib, more like C’s next set of texts below this line.

41. Other things scattered on 47v, near the top, illegible.

42. Item 597, the ben. dominus beginning Adesto Domine supplicationibus into which this marginalia intrudes into the capital A.

43. Three dot insertion mark; the next item beginning Benedic domine deus omnipotens (item 598), above the B at line 18 is marked with a corresponding signe de renvoi set of three dots. Presumably this is to link “and this collect” to the collect beginning at line 18.

44. Barely legible; see reading in Corrêa 598 and by T. J. Brown, 35.

45. Not very legible at all; see reading in Corrêa 598 and by T. J. Brown, 35.

47. T. J. Brown, 30.

48. M₃ changes in Quire IX between fols. 68 and 72 (T. J. Brown, p. 35): 68r₂₀–27, 28 (clementi miseratione repelle. per); 68v₄, 15, 23–27; 69r at top (predicamus); 69r₇, 24; 69v₁₁, 32; 69v₁₇ (uel memoriam), 28 (cuthberhti), 29 (quesumus); 70r₄, 18, 24; 70v₂₄; 71r₆; 72v₁₆.

49. Added in left margin and below at line 24, probably hand of Scribe C given the style of “r.”

50. Uespertin. laudis prayer found in Ratoldus 2175; Wulfstan Collectar (vol. 2 in Dewick, Leofric Collectar), 564; and Port. Wulstan 1366 for Sunday Vespers; see Deshusses, vol. 1, 1506, p. 489.

51. The dominus uobiscum et cum spiritu tuo is oxidized rubric. The spu tu (spiritu tuo according to Lind.) but no abbreviation marks in evidence.

52. Large “O” and oversized Omps in oxidized ink.

53. Omnipotens prayer also found in Ratoldus 2173; LM A 2647; Port. Wulstan 1362 for Vespers Feria V; see Deshusses 1, 1504, p. 488.

54. Correction (M₃) of middle “e,” dot under and “i” added above to make meridie.

55. Rubric, oxidized ink.

56. Correction (M₃) of “e,” dot under and “a” added above to make facias.

57. Rubric, oxidized ink.

58. Currently unidentified prayer.

59. Correction (M₃) of “x,” dot under and “ct” added above to make noxiū. The use of noxiū in earlier texts left uncorrected by M₃ suggests he was selectively interested in the Durham A.IV.19 additional texts.

60. The et incomprehensa is lined out, possibly by C.

61. Insertion mark with habere added above (M₃).

62. Added by M₃.

63. The cross memorials on fol. 68vi-7 and 17-30 do not seem to match 14 September Exaltation of the Cross prayers in other service books, nor are they in the original collectar (see the six prayers to the cross on fol. 45ri-21, items 575-80 and compare LM A 1945-49); four pages are missing before item 575 with unknown material. See also Ælfwine, 44-46 (pp. 122-28) and 50 (pp. 131-33) for prayers and offices devoted to the cross.

64. Vertical parallel double line ruling visible in left margin for most of the page. Something written along the top edge of the page, “orr??ns [h]omo,” could be Scribe C’s hand.

65. Left margin, antiphona abbreviation rubric here and oratio abbreviation at line 3 in different ink; now shows as white against dark stain in upper left corner of ms.

66. 68v1-2 Crucem tuam adoramus domine, antiphon in RGP 2: 334 as part of Good Friday (starts at 304); used in the Port. Wulstan 1: 749, part of section 744-49 labeled Antiphone ante Crucem decantandæ dum deferrur with the elevation of the cross; see also the private prayers in Port. Wulstan, 2: 18-22, with Latin and Old English. A different antiphon with the same incipit is used in the Wulfstan Collectar (Leofric Collectar, 536) for Good Friday at the elevation of the cross: Crucem tuam adoramus domine et sanctam resurrectionem tuam laudamus et glorificamus ecce enim propter crucem uenit gaudium in uniuerso mundo. Ps. Deus misereatur.

67. Possibly added. Lind. follows with Scribe M3’s left margin addition of A. per signum crucis.

68. 68v3-5 Respic domine super hanc familiam, see the Leofric Collectar 129 collect ad tertiam feria V in cena domini, and 169 collect ad tertiam in inventione sancte crucis; Ælfwine item 46, Devotions to the Holy Cross, sect. 18 (ed. Günzel, HBS 108, p. 127); and the Port. Wulstan item 1781, also for Terce at the Invention of Cross.

69. Erasure of one or two characters after tradi, with two minimis visible.

70. Correction (M3) of nocentiam with dot under “a” and “u” added above to make nocentium. Correction (M3) of ad, underlined with et added above.

71. Lind. adds here the Versicle from M3 left margin addition: V. Adoramus te christe et benedicimus tebi qui per crucem tuam redemisti mundum.

72. Faint, large P now light colored against dark stain; -ius barely visible. Oxidized ink, as with head words below.

73. 68v6-7 Pius ac benignus currently unidentified.

74. M3 marginal addition of last Versicle goes here, presumably. V. Dicite in nationibus dominus regnauit a ligno.

76. Antiphon per signum crucis in Port. Wulstan, item 1600 and Wulfstan Collectar (Leofric Collectar, 574) for Vespers, Kal. Oct. Exaltatio Sanctae Crucis.

77. Wormald (Durham Ritual, ed. T. J. Brown, p. 48) has –dicamus but Brown, 35, and my reading have –dicimus.

78. Wormald (Durham Ritual, ed. T. J. Brown, 48) identifies as Orationes vespertinales in The Gregorian Sacramentary under Charles the Great, ed. H. A. Wilson (HBS, 1915).

79. Oxidized Alia here and below at end of lines 10 and 12.

80. 68v8–10 Oriatur evening prayer, see Ratoldus 2170; Leofric Collectar 67, and the Wulfstan Collectar in Leofric Collectar, 564; see also Deshusses, vol. 1, item 1501.

81. Wormald points out (Durham Ritual, ed. T. J. Brown, 48) that Lind. erroneously places here M3 left margin addition: V. Dicite in nationibus dominus regnauit a ligno. It should be at the end of line 7.

82. 68v11–12 Concede evening prayer, in Ratoldus 2171; LM A 2649 but with a different incipit before concede: Tuus est dies domine et tua est nox (see Deshusses, vol. 1, item 1502); also in Leofric Collectar 68 and Wulfstan Collectar, Leofric Collectar, 564.

83. Concede solem in oxidized ink. Final “e” of Concede appears to be added above “d,” in same ink.

84. 68v13–16 Uespertina oratio currently unidentified.

85. Title in different color; Antifo is faint red; rest in more oxidized ink.

86. “A” of Adoramus not visible, except perhaps some faint lower lines.

87. Oxidized.

88. Semi-decorated capital A, in the brown ink with red coloring.

89. Correction (M₃?) with a hooked comma under to add another “i” to make subsidiis.

90. Large capital P extending down a line.

91. On the per signum crucis antiphon, see M₃ addition in margin, noted above.

92. V is faint; “o” of next word is darkened, either filled in or corrected.

93. Correction (M₃) added “te” above end of adorat to make adorat te deus.

94. Barely visible.

95. Opening two words very faint; relying on Lind.; assume different ink.

96. Correction (C or M₃?): ut lined out.

97. Alia antiphona oxidized, faint; “O” appears to be in a different color, is faint. Perhaps the scribe was running out of room and declined to start a new line.

98. Correction: M₃ added “re” above to make portare.

99. Four dots here may indicate an insertion or abbreviation, possibly V for versiculus. omnis terrae that follows; perhaps added by Scribe M₃, similar to omnis terrae at line 2.

100. Barely visible.

101. Word broken up, possibly due to erasure, especially after the “i”: “tu i tione.”

107. Marginal insertions of “or,” “V,” “an,” on this page appear to be in brown ink.

108. Space after honore, either due to a pre-existing stain or erasure.

109. Two dot insertion mark above ā, pointing to predicamus top margin correction (M₃).

110. Compare to very similar wording in original collectar, item 444 (fol. 34vi–3); Port. Wulstan item 1627 for matins.

111. Blessed Virgin Mary 69r3–13 [b], see in the original collectar: the Assumption of Mary, xvii kal. sept., (15 August), Corrèa items 407–412, item 415 matches 69r6–8 (and Port. Wulstan 1548–1589); the Nativity of Mary, vi id. sept (8 September) items 424–36 with 432 matching 69r10–13, where it is followed by Michael material as here. Mary Clayton, The Cult of the Virgin Mary in Anglo-Saxon England (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1990), pp. 64–65 compares this text to the Leofric Collectar (4–5) and Cotton Tiberius A.iii; she also has a translation of this prayer (p. 64 n. 47).

135. Fading on this first line through Deus qui nos.

136. This caret mark is partly over the “r.”

137. Oxidized ink for this heading.

138. “Cor” of Corpora in red, faded.

139. The eorum in eternum added into right margin, small and stacked with “i ætnu” abbreviation above “eo” abbreviation. The eorum looks like it could be Scribe C, but the in aeternum looks like it could be M₃.

140. The “v” is red but accent abbreviation mark above it looks brown.

141. Oxidized ink for this heading; title belongs above at line 13.

142. The or/ Ds cuius in red and faded; “or” not clear at all.

143. The t memoriam added above by M₃.

144. Added above, smaller, angled line above to set off from previous line.

148. Capital “E” extending down a line, Ex oxidized.

149. Insertion after “N” and above beginning of comemoratione by M₃: cuthberhti.

150. Correction by M₃ to insert quesumus (spelled out completely) above and between tibi and meritis.
 151. “P” of Presta colored in, oxidized.

152. The “et” appears to be a later correction with an amperstand over erasure of “ut” (underlined).

153. First letter “A” of Adesto is capital and in oxidized ink, faint; title at end of line red and then white due to stain discoloration. Other white marks here and in the upper margin are mirror of whitened oxidized letters on fol. 69v that the corner stain has transferred here.

154. End of line damaged; enlarged dark stroke of “a” in minas seems to be overwritten, although this heavy stroke is visible on other “a” letters.

155. Correction adding “c” by either M₃ or Scribe C.

156. Correction (M₃), underlining -litud and adding above -les to make mortales; also insertion of “in” between ad and mortales.

157. The “s” appears to be added after, squeezed between the two words, possibly by Scribe C.

158. LM lists Iustorum animae as a responsory under communion chant and gradual in 1368, 1449, 1474, 1487, 1553, 1715, 1768; 1491 1628, 1666; these only have a one or two word incipit, so cannot be identified clearly with this antiphon.

159. This entire line (see also 70v17) looks slightly smaller, comparable to smaller lines on fols. 70v6–7, 71r8–9. Also noticeable are different abbreviations: “4” for rum, seen also in lines 20 and 27; Irish “h” autem abbreviation for autem, see W. M. Lindsay, Notae Latinae (Hildesheim: Goerg Olms, 1963), p. 498 and supplement by Doris Bains, p. 3.

160. Title and first word of next line in red and partially oxidized ink.

161. Correction of “i” above “a” to make sancti.

163. Last word overrun into the margin.

164. A search for the first two prayers, Deus consolationis et pacis (fol. 70r15–24) and Presta quesumus domine ut intercedentibus (fol. 70r25–29) turned up no results in the original collector, LM, Port. Wulstan, Ælwine, Fulda, or Ratoldus, although the language of Presta quesumus domine ut intercedent is common in prayers for saints’ days. For other services ad mortuos plurimos, see Ratoldus 430–32, pp. 433–34 and LM A 2179–2187.

170. The “tur” is lined out; there may also be a correction at the end of the previous line to the end of resuscitati.

172. “P” of Presta darkened, oxidized.

This entire section from the title Ad mortuos plurimos through the end of this line is barely legible, due to fading and discoloration of the ink.¹⁷⁸. Margin contains three lines, white against dark stain: lectio rœi [?] tot’ [?]. Lind. has just lectio. . . .¹⁷⁹. A signe de renvoi after faciēt in right margin (;) extends down a bit. Lind. places the added text after fol. 7iv3 as if it belongs with this mass text, but it belongs with the memorials for the Dead (QIX/X.22).

209. CCCC 422 (Red Book of Darley) p. 468 has a similar prayer, preceded by one matching 22L below.

210. Red, widely spaced and large letters written in upper margin near the top: in nomine domine cān, unclear whose hand.

211. The "of" and following V in red.

212. Offertory and Versicle in minuscule, runs into right margin and gutter. Last word Lind. has leuaui, but it looks like "delv" with abbreviation mark over the "l" (marred by bleed through of capital "D" on recto).

213. Ad communion abbreviation in left margin in red; large P of Proficiet also in red. Gap between corpori and final "s" due to patch in ms, also creating gap in line above between Offertory and Versicle.

214. LM A 1888–1893 for one confessor has different prayers, but the two here can be found in specific confessor's masses in other service books. The opening prayer Exaudi domine (7iv8–11) is in Fulda 119 for Pope Leo, item 842; Ælfwine 73.20, collect for apostles; and in the Gelasian Sacramentary. In natali sancti Marcelli confessoris, xvii Kal. Feb. (ed. Wilson, p. 162). The closing prayer Sumentes domine gaudia (72rr3–16) is in the Gelasian Sacramentary. In natali sanctae Agnetis virginis de passione sua, xii Kal. Feb. (ed. Wilson, p. 164). Both prayers occur together in Ratoldus 1566 and 1568 for Natale Sancti Samsonis.

215. Title and "A" red, faded; antiphons in minuscule.

217. A short curving line under sacer-; next three lines added in minuscule. In left margin: “+ ad complendum.” Lind. places after the reading, line 72r3 suavitatis where there is another cross, signe de renvoi. The text of the ad complendum starts with a large decorative A extending down a line; see LM A 2186, mass for the dead and compare to 70v26–30 above.

218. Compare CCCC 422 (Red Book of Darley), p. 468.

219. Stain in upper corner. Large patched hole below, in right side of lines 2–3, which the scribe works around. Four other patched holes on this page, with patch glued on from this side (recto).

220. Scribe C’s Old English note shows a Northumbrian dialect with nioða (see T. J. Brown, Durham Ritual, 29–30, 54). Scribe C explains that the gospel text below should be put here (e.g., the Matthew passage on fol. 75v should precede the R, V, A), but unclear whether before or after the postcommunion prayer on fol. 71v27–29.

221. Red R, V and A in this line; whole line in minuscule.

222. Red incipit In illo tempore; large intial “I” extends down two lines.

223. Correction (Scribe C?) with descender of “s” extending down between qm and omnia as an insertion mark.

I et aqua sapientiæ salutaris potauit illum

224. The beatus seruus qui is in minuscule.

225. The “ad c” in left margin very faint, red.

226. LM A 1872–1877 for a martyr has different prayers with some similar phrasing; more exact match in Ælfwine 73.30 for opening prayer Deus qui nos beati illius mærtymris (72r19–22), also in Ratoldus 1645 and LM A 1633, for St. Eusebius.

227. Title line in red, faint; next line small letters; red for “A” and “ps.”

228. Line 18 antiphon in minuscule. Large gap between exau- and -di due to a large patch in ms, which also affects next line, m-ærtyris.

229. Large D extends down one line.

230. Large decorated B (red letter with brown fill) extends down one line.

231. Correction with an insertion mark between “b” and “i,” letters above are blotched, illegible.

232. Curving line marking end of reading continued on verso; four lines below in minuscule are Alia prayers for the dead that Lind. erroneously inserts after the reading finishes at fol. 72v5.

233. Similar prayer in CCCC 422 (Red Book of Darley), p. 457.

234. Large A descends below; lines 28–30 hanging indent; minuscule. Ascendant ad te (a common opening, cf. LM A 2634, Fulda 2346) is found in Fulda 454 (item 2556) and 455 (item 2562) in masses for dead but also above at fol. 70v26, somewhat different.

235. Correction with “v” inserted above “o” to make famvlorum.

236. Word partici- -pes broken due to patch in lower margin.

237. Last, back, page of quire IX, worn and faint; relying on Lind. for some readings. Also, large patched holes, one near the left side of lines 2–3, around which the scribe wrote; another mars the middle of lines 18–19; two others are in the left and bottom margins.

238. A and V in red, text in minuscule.

239. Very faded red title line. Lind. has only seq. . . . euangeli sc'dm iohannem.

240. Correction (M3) with insertion mark and michi written above.241. The “co” in red; minuscule for text. Lind. places this communion prayer incipit after the Sumptis . . . augmentum text on lines 18–20.

242. Correction with insertion dot between words and “illo” above.

243. LM A 1878–1882 mass for several martyrs has different prayers, but the opening prayer Presta quesumus omnipotens deus ut beatorum mærtymrum occurs in LM A 1823 in the mass for St. Felicity, also in Ratoldus 1942; ad complendum (fol. 73r19–22) not currently identified; see also Tolhurst, Hyde Abbey, vol. 3, fo. 243.244. Title (red) illegible. This is all that Lind. has and should probably read in natale plurimorum martyrum. Red “A” then small brown ink minuscule for antiphon end of line 21 through 22.

245. Antiphon all in small letters. the “p.” abbreviation in line 22, has accent mark over.

246. Capital “P” extends down a line and is brown, not red.

247. This is all that Lind. has. Before precibus, the previous word ends in –mur, probably protegamur (based on same prayer in LM 1823). Lectio title in red.248. “F” and possibly other letters of Fratres appears to be in red.

249. Relying on Lind. for lines 26–27 (the latter a half line starting midway).

250. Quire break shows wear on both 72v and 73r, with parts illegible. The singlet fol. 73 is very thick, and shiny on the recto.

251. Relying on Lind. for words in upper right corner with staining, and elsewhere on fol. 73, especially down the right side, faint due to wear and tear as first page of quire X.

252. Lines 1–2, see Leofric Collectar 325–26.

253. Lind. has just “hi” but I see two minims.

254. Red letters R and V, minuscule text.

255. See Leofric Collectar 324 and 325 for this responsory.

256. Small letters, barely legible.

257. Very washed out red.

258. Title in red.

259. Tolhurst, Hyde Abbey, vol. 3, fo. 242; this line appears in the mass for one martyr in Tolhurst.

260. Line 18 texts in minuscule.

261. The opening prayer, Da quesumus omnipotens deus ut qui beata (73r23–25) has generic similarities in many commune sanctorum prayers; the post-communion prayer (74r8–10), is found in the Ælfwine Prayerbook 73.72 for the same purpose.

262. Very faint red; Lind. has only In . . . uirgine.

263. Red “A” and then initial lower case “d”; minuscule after that, virtually illegible; Lind. does not have anything.

276. This set combines an apostle or martyr as indicated in the title but also the alternative of a confessor as mentioned in the first sentence (74r12–13), a prayer that is found in Ælfwine 73.4 and the original collectar (Corrēa 500) for the same purpose, as well as in the original collectar again, Corrēa 469 (St. Martin), LM A 1883 (Confessors), Fulda 1367 (St. Remigius), Ratoldus 1840 (Dionisius, Rusticus, and Eleutherius). The closing prayer (74v18–21, Benedixionis tue domine intercedente) is found in the original collectar (Corrēa 502, Apostles), LM A 1888 (Confessor), Ælfwine 73.10 (Apostles), Fulda 1030 (Bonface), Fulda 1371 and Ratoldus 1844 (martyrs Dionisius, Rusticus, and Eleutherius).

²⁹⁸. Comparable texts include the original collectar, fols. 60r7–61r10 (Corrēa 657–67); Ælfwine, 171–197; and LM A 2573–2652. Exact parallels to these and other texts are noted below. No comparable texts were found in private prayer books such as Nunnaminster, Cerne, or Royal, only Ælfwine.

²⁹⁹. [a] 76ri–3 Lumen splendoris for vespers in Ælfwine 73.190, but here presumably for Prime since the next item is labeled Alia and the one after that is Terce.

³⁰⁰. [b] 76r4–5 In hac prima die hora, Alia (presumably for Prime); also found in the original collectar, Corrēa 657 (fol. 60r7–9) and the Leofric Collectar 69. Alia is dark, faded, possibly oxidized.

³⁰¹. [c] 76r6–8 Tibi subnexibus precibus, Terce; no parallels located. Dark stain in upper right corner, washed out letters (Lind. has “ora tercia”).

Antiphons, versicles, responds for lections: Kings, Wisdom, Job³¹⁰

Quire X, last page, too worn to read

Scribe F, three columns, illegible, cannot transcribe.

302. End of concedere hard to read under dark stain; ibs xpe p is written in right margin, small.

303. [d] 76r9–13 Domine iesu christe qui multa mirabilia, Sext; see The Benedictine Office: An Old English Text, ed. James M Ure (Edinburgh: University Press, 1957), 97. Relying on Lind. for 76r9 sextam at end of line.

304. [e] 76r14–16 Nona igitur diei hora ad te, None; no parallels located.

305. [f] 76r17–19 Inlumina domine tenebrosa corda, Compline; found in original collectar, Corrêa 245 (fol. r8r18–19), Ælfwine 73.193 (p. 174), Leofric Collectar 515, Port. Wulstan 325, and LM A 2611. Darkened ink on title.

306. [g] 76r20–23 Noctem hanc inlumina mentibus, Alia; no parallels located.

307. h] 76r24–26 Domine iesu christe qui nos redemisti, item Alia; found in the original collectar, Corrêa 662 (fol. 6ov8–10) and Ælfwine 73.194 (p. 174).

308. Correction, probably by Scribe C.

309. Followed by a later hand, alphabet “a” through “m” clear, fading away to right. In lower margin, left side, another hand has added the abbreviation “Dne.”

310. Compare to fols. 64v–65r (QVIII.10), also the work of Scribe F.

QUIRE XI BOOKLET

Quire XI (fols. 77–88), 6 sheets, flesh-hair, relatively stiff.

Aldred minuscule fols. 77r–84ra2, 85r–88v,¹ with Cuthbert collects, colophon and memorandum on fol. 84r between in experimental scripts; fol. 84v Scribe E. Single-column on fol. 77rv, double columns from fols. 78r–88v.

The hymns have red titles, fairly consistent abbreviations of Latin and Old English, and occasional glosses with “vel” followed by no alternative. Hy references are to Inge Milfull’s edition, The Hymns of the Anglo-Saxon Church: A Study and Edition of the ‘Durham Hymnal’ (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1996).

27. fol. 77r12–18

Hymn for Terce, Nunc sancte nobis spiritus (Hy 8)
 Aldred, minuscule; glossed.

3. Obscured by stain in upper right corner, relying on Lind. for OE tunga gimet. Missing words supplied from Milfull, Linguam re-[frenans].

4. Missing word supplied from Milfull, visum.

5. Relying on Lind. for end of line, esp. last word of OE.

6. Milfull, Hymns, 128, has sors, glossed hlot.

7. Reduxerit in red uncials, possibly over erasure (see Milfull, Hymns, 129).

8. See note in QXI.29 (Hy 10) below about glossing paraclito with rummode.

9. Milfull, Hymns, 129, notes that the doxology is a combination of two lines and could not have been sung this way. After the Hy 7 ending Deo patri sit gloria, Durham adds a line found in Hy 1 (Milfull, Hymns, 109).

10. Added vocative la, found in two other instances, at fol. 33r2 glossing “O quam pulchra” and below at 80r4 “la god.”

11. Milfull text and other hymnals end here.

12. The dry point ruling, horizontal and vertical (three parallel on right side), is very visible on lines 16–20 on the right side especially, because it is darkened (compare vertical ruling on fol. 86 with white lines).

13. Illegible; word is meri-/diem in Milfull.

14. Concordium is cordium in other mss (Milfull, Hymns, 131).

15. Hard to read, heavily abbreviated; relying on Lind. for OE. Lind. has cum spiritu at the end, but Milfull suggests et spiritus paraclitus amen.

16. Alternate reading for rerum (ðinga) added above with a line separating giscæfta from the title; it appears from this that the red title was added after the gloss, since the title is indented unlike the others. Same red ink for titles and gloss.

17. Lind. has determinans, but it is an “e” ligature to the “t” not an “i,” as Milfull, Hymns, 133, notes.

18. Correction to præm, “i” inserted with colon insertion mark, “vm” added above.

19. Closing line from Hy 3 (Milfull, Hymns, 118).

31. fol. 77vi4–18

Hymn for Vespers Sunday eve, O lux beata trinitas (Hy 1)
 Aldred, minuscule; glossed.

20. Rummode glossing paraclito (a Greek loanword into Latin), glosses below (and normally) clemens.
 Hy 3 with this doxology glosses spiritu paraclito with gaste frofer (Milfull, 117).

21. A small minim added above final “e” of unice, in dark ink, although unice is correct. The other manuscript editions in Milfull end with Pater piisime.

22. See discussion in Milfull, Hymns, 58.

23. Same gloss as for paraclito above.

24. Gloss anticipates word on next line.

25. Other manuscript editions in Milfull end here.

26. The “am . . .” is small and headed into the margin; it could have been added later if he initially intended to add the third, doxology verse from this hymn (Milfull, 109).

27. Fifth Sunday after Pentecost in the Benedictional of Æthelwold [Ben. Æthel], BL Additional MS 49598, fol. 74r10–74v3; see the Benedictional of St. Æthelwold: A Masterpiece of Anglo-Saxon Art, A Facsimile, ed. Andrew Prescott (British Library, 2001) and Benedictional of St. Æthelwold, ed. G. F. Warner and H. A. Wilson (Roxburghe Club, 1910).

28. T. J. Brown, Durham Ritual, 34–35, 42.

29. Decorated O.

30. Ben. Æthel. has in uobis (74r13).

31. Ben. Æthel. has enutriat (74r17).

32. Ben. Æthel. ends with AMEN in red (74v2).

33. In Ben. Æthel., quod ipse (with a gold “q”) ends the set of prayers, whereas Scribe M2 continues with the closing formula præstare dignetur. . . . In other cases, Ben. Æthel. adds more to the formula, up through dignetur (cf. fol. 69v18) or fully in several places (cf. fol. 63v1–13), although different from here.

34. Gallican Capitella; see Tolhurst, Hyde Abbey, vol. 6, 30–36; also The Benedictine Office, ed. Ure, 81–95. The version here lacks the suffrages labeled pro fidelibus defunctis, pro fratribus nostris absentibus, and pro afflictis et captiuis found before the capitular office in Tolhurst, Hyde Abbey, vol. 6, 35–36; although see the Little Hours below (QXI.36).

35. Looks like capitulae, with first “u” erased to modify to an “i.”

36. Note title, in red, is centered above both columns. This is also a rare instance of a glossed title. In the bottom margin of fol. 78r under the right side of column a, a later hand has added some pen trials, including the name Ricardus (somewhat messy). The gloss over primam appears to have an “i” inserted over the “p” to make “pim.”

37. Ps. 118:175–176; Benedictine Office, 87.

38. Lind. supplies ending to form laudabit, but there is no abbreviation mark in the ms.

39. The “pat” inserted later above “o” of omnipotentem, in brown ink.

40. Abbreviation mark above final “i” of “cli.”

41. The word ecvum is over uitam, with life added above ecvum.

42. Note here the gloss of even the amen.

43. Ps. 70:8; Benedictine Office, 91.

47. Final "o" is below "n."

48. Final "t" preceded by an abbreviation mark is below the "h."

51. A worn or grayish spot over mibi and affecting its letters, while OE me is written to the right of the blot, which must have been there already.

54. A narrow elongated patched hole in the ms page caused the scribe to make a break in "mis-eri" and in the next line between "me" and "ds."

55. Ps. 34:1-2 through line 15; Benedictine Office, 90. The Vulgate has nocentes, but both Lind. and Tolhurst, Hyde Abbey, vol. 6, 32, have nocentem.

56. The "gi" is added above in the middle of a space between the two parts of the word.

57. A black ink spot mars this word, blocking the "e" of ðe. Possibly the dark ink used by the messy pen trial "Ricardus."

58. Note here and elsewhere on this page the severe abbreviation (of tenebris to "te") while the OE gloss is a complete word (ðiostro).

59. The gloss sibbes is in the margin, worn and faint; the first "b" is not clearly evident.

60. Ps. 50:9- through line 6; Benedictine Office, 91.

61. This line added in smaller hand, an extra line compared to column a, either to finish the sentence and start on the next page with a new capital letter, or possibly added later if the phrase was inadvertently omitted on the page turn.

62. Gloss line written a little higher above first line; god written below in mec.

63. Lind. has in i'naðv' minv'

64. Damage to this corner hard to read.

65. Hard to read due to staining of ms.

66. Added below, to right of “t” in Latin abbreviation of tui. Lind. has expanded the Latin to sanctam tuam, but the text of Ps. 50:14 is salutaris tui, which Aldred glosses with the equivalent Old English.

67. Ps. 139:1; Benedictine Office, 91.

68. Ps. 58:1-2 through line 12; Benedictine Office, 92.

69. The “n” of on is washed out. Also, narrow rectangular patch between ds and ms extending between lines 10 and 11 (on recto as well); patch is on this, the verso, side, recto shows hole is more rounded.

70. Final “t” written below “h.” Unclear why he avoids going into the margin between the columns for just one letter since on the lines below, the gloss goes further into this margin.

71. Ps. 60:8; Benedictine Office, 92.

72. Gloss “min” written below, beside Latin “m” abbreviation.

73. Ps. 64:5; Benedictine Office, 92.

74. The “o” added above final “e” in same hand; dot below the “e” to mark error.

75. Ps. 69:1; Benedictine Office, 82.

76. The “lic” is below.

77. Hard to read gloss.

78. Notice vocative here instead of the usual Agnus dei.79. Ps. 102:1–5 through line 15; Benedictine Office, 92.80. Note again extensive abbreviation of end words but with full OE gloss. Also, glossed word bis is written below, beside final Latin word.

81. Note lack of abbreviation so that the phrase takes several lines; verses are reversed here from Psalm 102; Qui coronat . . . should precede Qui neplet . . . (Tolhurst, Hyde Abbey, vol. 6, 34).

82. With this vel alternative, he extends into the gutter; Lind. has “7 giriorde l in sprec.” But it looks like another ond (7) after giriorde, then below it a vel sign, followed by “in,” then below that a word I cannot read but which Lind. has as sprec with an accent over the “e.” Note also “l” in next line of gloss with no alternate word offered.

83. Second “d” added above; possible erasure below.

84. Runs to 24 lines to finish this text. The addition of peccatori after ora pro me is found in the Book of Nunnaminster, in a confession added in a late tenth century hand on fol. 41r (ed. Birch, 97): ora pro me peccatricę with uel peccatori then added in lighter ink.

85. Final “vm” written below.

86. Marginal addition is in dark ink, but the three dot insertion mark above it and the matching one at the end of line 11 are in the red ink of the gloss.

91. Fol. 79ra19–79rb20 is presumably the Capitular Office noted by Tolhurst, Hyde Abbey, vol. 6, 36.92. Ps. 89:16–17 through line 6; Benedictine Office, 95, capitular office, where the Gloria follows as it does here (Pater noster precedes).

120. Ps. 27:9.

121. The “vel” is written beside ðinv' but ðinra is written below extender of “e” of Lat. tua (Lind. has ðinre?). There is a space between the “r” and the “a.” Seems to be a grammatical problem in the Latin: hereditate is abl. sing. f. but should be dat. hereditati (looks like a minim stroke has been added on the front of and below the “e”). Tua is dative or genitive sing. f; so ðinum is dative sing. masc. or neuter; while ðinre is dat. or gen. sing. f. and ðinra is gen. plural f, m, n. Assuming dative case of the Latin, is he confused about the gender of the noun because of the error in hereditateli? The only other instance of erfevardniso in his glossing is at fol. 29v13 hereditas (nom.). See also below at fol. 81ra11 for hereditatę tua glossed erfevardnisse ðinre.

Rubric referring to three collects¹³²

129. Squeezed in an extra line, just two words, though, and the text continues on the reverse. Also, custodire in line above seems to have an abbreviation mark above the “r” for unclear reasons.

130. The word duru is unclear, plus the use of “u” instead of “v” is odd in this section; the t dor is above. Aldred seems to use duru and dor interchangeably and as alternatives with each other or with gett when he glosses hostia, inanua, and porta in Durham A.IV.19 and in the Lindisfarne Gospels (see DOE entries for dor and duru).

131. The right extender of the “D” goes up into the previous line in front of anima.

132. The rubric is clearly written with plenty of space, not something added later. It appears to offer directions for where to find collects to accompany the Little Hours capitella preceding (36) which lack collects at the end. It could refer to the three Vespers collects in the following material, one immediately after (fol. 8ova12–22) and two after the Vespers capitella at fol. 82ra7–b11, labeled at fol. 82ra6 with rubric oratio sequitur; however at least the first two prayers explicitly mention vespers and reflections on the end of the day. F. Wormald, Durham Ritual 49, suggests looking back to Prime collects on fol. 79v (QXI.34–35); despite the fact that the rubric says to “look below,” the Prime prayers would be better candidates for adapting to the

133. Lines 10–11 in red for title; glossed only on instruction to “look below,” not on the title.

134. Not found in original collector; unidentified in other service books and prayer books, although given the pattern of missing or different incipits in the other collects (34 and 39), these prayers may occur elsewhere.

Celtic rather than Gallican in origin, with four of the suffrages associated with Bangor Antiphoner and Rule of Columbanus: pro episcopo nostro, pro fidelibus defunctis, pro benefactoribus nostris, and pro afflictis et captiuis, although the latter is not labeled as such but falls within QXI.38s. See Tolhurst, Hyde Abbey, vol. 6, 19–30; Roper, Medieval English Benedictine Liturgy, 11–14; and Port. Wulstan, p. 92.

141. Added later in the margin.

142. New section in other versions of intercessions for the community, Oratio Communis Fratrum (Tolhurst, Hyde Abbey, vol. 6, 25).

143. Other versions label the prayers between fol. 81vb–82ra4 Pro afflictis et captiuis, and follow with De martyribus and Ad martyres materials not included here before the concluding Miserere mei deus (Tolhurst, Hyde Abbey, vol. 6, 26–27).

144. Ps. 69:1, standard in most hours; cf. Benedictine Office, 96–98 for Terce, Sext, None; 82 for Prime.

145. Lind. has ad adiuuandum, but the ms clearly has “adiad” although the second “a” looks like a “u” corrected with a long mark over the top and the final “d” is faint. It is as if he started to do “adiu-” instead of “ad.”

146. Final two letters squeezed in small, with the “a” under a small and elevated “n.”

147. The svnv is broken in half, with the final “nv” below.

¹⁵¹. Added above line. No ablative in OE, so he gives dative (usum) and then adds accusative (vserne); see vel ðinra at fol. 8ora25.

¹⁵². Lind. corrects to "seruum" but the first letter is clearly an "f" identical to the "f" in fac before it.

¹⁵³. The "ite" with abbreviation mark very small.

¹⁵⁴. Lind. has hereditati. The ms looks like either an "ç" or an "e" with an "i" correction under it, in the same dark ink. See above at fol. 8ora24 for the same psalm verse.

155. Lind. notes this reading of tunum as clear in the ms, which it is. The Durham Ritual Glossary lists it as tur[um] as a seemingly correct gloss of Latin turribus (but this is the only instance listed by the glossary). Bosworth and Toller note that tur is attested in the Chronicle only from after the Norman Conquest as influenced by French and thus question its use in Durham A.IV.19. Aldred apparently does not have tur as an option for Latin tower and uses instead OE tun (manor, habitation). On the other hand, torr is attested in OE as a Latin loan word; Bosworth and Toller note that the native word is stipel. But stipel does not occur in the Durham Ritual Glossary as used by Aldred. A second meaning listed for torr is the Celtic sense of a rock or outcropping (no Northumbrian examples given). Also, it is worth noting that the Latin turribus is broken at a line into tur-ribus and that the first “r” at the end of line 18 seems to have been added on or squeezed in and is stylistically an OE “r” not the Latin “r.”

156. The “a” is added below the “n.”

157. Relying on Lind. for “in crist” due to staining in corner.

158. The in christo is not in other versions (Tolhurst, Hyde Abbey, vol. 6, 23); in the next heading [i], pro navigantibus, “fidelibus” as found in other versions is omitted, but the in bonis that follows may be part of the title.

	la driht' hal mec do

^{159.} No period to indicate end of title, just abbreviation mark; unclear whether in bonis is part of the title or the beginning of the prayer, which normally starts with exaudi, since neither the “in” nor the “e” of exaudi are capped in any way.

^{160.} The omnibus and nobis are not in other versions (Tolhurst, Hyde Abbey, vol. 6, 23).

^{161.} The “t” is added below the “n.” Enim abbreviation is two vertical lines crossed through.

^{162.} Another “vel” without an alternate word.

^{163.} Other versions are slightly different: Pax dei qui exsuperat omnem sensum corda uestra et intelligentias nostras in christo ihesu (Tolhurst, Hyde Abbey, vol. 6, p. 24).

^{164.} Added in the margin, extends beside lines 17–20; same hand, but small, with black ink for both Latin and OE gloss. He must have discovered the skipped text after the column was finished and even after the gloss was complete. The gloss is to the right of the Latin, not always following the Latin line breaks; the Latin is in OE script (note “v” instead of “u”).

25	cum tribularentvr ¹⁷² 7 de necessitatibus hira alesde hia
26	eorum liberauit eos

165. Missing “s” on tuos.

166. The words nobis and in hoc mundo not found in other versions (Tolhurst, Hyde Abbey, vol. 6, 24); other versions also have a suffrage pro graciis agantibus preceding this one.

167. Damage to “c” of hoc and “m” of mundo.

168. The abbreviation of Ps. 111[112]:9 is so severe here that Aldred misreads cornu as cor and glosses it accordingly as heart. Pavperibus and eius in line 21 have an “-us” abbreviation (“ȝ”) that is unusual for him (above, he used the more question mark style of an elevated comma with a dot below). Also, the eius here at the end of line 22 is a circle with a horizontal line through it, which might be an “e.”

169. Seems to be a long mark over the first “i” of captiuis, for some reason.

170. This mark in the red brown ink of the gloss occurs above the “ant” of tribulantr. Lind. has tribu- lantur but notes, p. 220, that it should be tribularentur (Ps.106:13).

171. The gloss ned' is written beside the Latin below the gloss of.

172. Final “vr” of tribulatnvr extended as if ending, but then he continues with an effort to squeeze in the rest of the sentence on this page, using an “et” sign and severe abbreviation of necessitatibus. Line 26 added below, in center, is also smaller and severely abbreviated, as is the end of line 25. He tends to want to finish a text or sentence when it involves a page turn, but is less concerned about an overrun to the next page not involving a page turn (e.g. fols. 81v–82r).

176. Lind. notes, p. 220, that it should be bestiis.

177. Lind. has ondettendo, but the “en” is clearly identical to the “en” later in the word.

178. Over the second “a” is an abbreviation mark, similar to one later in the line over the last “e” of confitentes, a horizontal line, with a thin descender from the right end, but unclear what it signifies in either case.

¹⁸⁴. This text seems more widely spaced, with 23 lines in each column, a blank line between the two collects (line 18), and large capital letters to start each prayer (lines 7 and 19); he also reverts to other abbreviation style for “–us.”

191. Milfull notes (Hymns, 134), that this hymn, which dates back to the Old Hymnal, is for Compline in summer, while #12 is for winter, although in a non-monastic hymnal, #11 is for weekdays only. Aldred's gloss is significantly different from the Durham Hymnal (Durham Cathedral Library B.III.32) that Milfull reproduces.

192. Red title. Title in Milfull, Hymns, is Ymnus Ad Completorium.

193. The “-nise” below.

194. Note how hymn verse ends midline and next verse starts a new line with a capital letter; similarly with next verse.

195. Lind, p. 220 n., suggests correction to noctium, which is what Milfull has as normative, noting the use of noxiūm here in the Durham Ritual (E) and also in C (CCCC 391). The OE gloss is næht, night rather than a gloss on noxious. Also, the previous line, sompnia is spelled in Milfull without the “p.”

196. Lind. and Milfull have conprime but “n” is clear.

197. All other versions in Milfull have omnipotens (elmihtiga), not piissime.

200. The “nos” squeezed in small.

201. The “terram” abbreviated, squeezed in small, not as much as “nos” above.

203. Another “vel” without an alternative; duplicated below at line 21, tabernaculum glossed hvsincil vel . . . These are the only two instances of hvsincil in Durham A.IV.19.

204. Note “vel” here with an alternate word. Hymn above (fol. 82rb18) glosses sompnum with only svoefen.

205. Heavy abbreviation here; also of dormi in line above. Note misspelling temp[oribus] with an “i.”

206. Compare line 13 above.

207. Squeezed in small.

208. Note omnipotentem spelled out and not abbreviated, with space left over, goes to next column, which includes more of the creed than is normally included in an incipit.

209. Abbreviation of meum to “mm,” the abbreviation mark is in the ink of the gloss. Also, lavde at the end of the line is a bit crowded.

^{210.} Gloss of in(-tueris), giscea- breaks with -vas below it.

^{211.} Note lack of translation of non-Latin names; compare Panchiel in the field prayers at fol. 66r5, 22, and 66v9.

^{212.} Gloss of lau(-dabilis), hergend- breaks with -lic below it.

^{213.} Looks like a long mark over the final “a” of vorvlda, not in Lind.

215. Correction in dark ink, underlining die and replacing it above with nocte; the gloss is added after the correction. Aldred must have forgotten he was working on night hours and wrote day initially, then immediately corrected himself.

216. No gloss; this is the header for the collect, Dirigere et custodire, also found at Prime (QXI.33, fol. 79rb9). Other versions include before the collect a series of psalms from Prime not included here (Tolhurst, Hyde Abbey, vol. 6, 38–39).

217. Final “a” of lichoma is below.

218. Initial “h” is missing, but added, according to Lind. (p. 220), with a sign for “h” over the line. The sign is a vertical line with a horizontal bar midline to the right.

219. Abbreviation of “-em” is just a line (essentially an en- or em-dash) after the “n” of oration-.

220. Extra line, words added much smaller, dark ink. OE gloss to the right of the words rather than above.

221. Added after and above between sequitur and oratio, seemingly finer nib. This title is in red ink and unglossed. These rubrics may have been added after the main text. What follows is the second, closing, collect; before this, later versions include more psalms (Tolhurst, Hyde Abbey, vol. 6, 39).

222. Damage or erasure of “ri” at end of tenebris.

223. Lind. has subnixis, but there are clearly two minimis on line 5, making subnixiis.

224. The beginning of this word is hard to read, even for Lind., who prefers heolstrvng and rejects ðiostrvng.

225. The middle “i” is missing and added below.

226. Psalms 6, 31(32), 37(38), 50(51), 101(102), 129(130) and 142(143).

227. Title in red ink, unglossed; horam is in right margin, small, and elevated. There appears to be something below it and primam, two or three letters possibly beginning with “o” and ending in “n,” potentially a gloss of .i. (one) in line 13.

228. Abbreviated Dne is in red ink of title; no evidence of gloss.

229. Note use of numbers here at line 13 to differentiate the two identical psalm incipits.

43. fols. 83rb22–84ra2

²³⁰. Variations in format compared to earlier: glossing titles not texts; titles are in red ink, with a dark gloss, for contrast; some initial letters of psalm incipits also in red (fol. 83va13, 87vb1–7, 13–15), perhaps done at the time of the titles and the rest filled in with black at the time of the gloss; extensive abbreviations at the end of lines in order to keep the incipit to a single line, sometimes abbreviating the familiar psalm words to a single letter.

²³¹. Title in red ink, unglossed.

²³². The last word, meam, is added above the end of iustitiam, small but in same ink.

²³³. Variant spelling: miseriatur for misereatur.

²³⁴. Abbreviated first word, Ds for Deus, appears to be added in the left margin in front of In te. There is a large space after te, an erasure of three or four characters. An early erased letter has an ascender, a later one has a descender. It could be ds, if In te Deus was changed to Deus in te ("I" of in te is cap). The "D" is in an OE style. T. J. Brown, Durham Ritual, 36 identifies this as a twelfth century hand changing the incipit from Gallican to Romanum; see also fol. 83vb5 below.

²³⁵. Different abbreviation mark than above for domine, more the lightening stroke.

²³⁶. Different word order from Vulgate, Domine deus meus in te speravi.

237. Dne in red. Many of the “d” letters in the last few pages have been the kind open at the top, perhaps a style in the exemplar.

238. Addition of “in” compared to Vulgate.

239. First letters in lines 1–7, 13–15 are in red.

240. The second psalm with this incipit is Ps. 70.

241. Lind. has Exaudi but the initial is not capped and the “u” is missing; at end of line, “dis” abbreviation is presumably variant for despexeris.

242. Despite shortening with abbreviation marks on mibi, domine, and quoniam, the last word runs into the right margin and is lighter. The lighter brown ink, wider nib starts with dne or possibly the abbreviation mark over “m” of mibi. The concul/ in particular looks like a different hand, not Aldred’s. Lighter background suggests possible erasure. See end of line 8 below for a similar addition, as well as 13–14. As with fol. 83va7 above, T. J. Brown, Durham Ritual, 36 identifies this as a twelfth century correction from Gallican to Romanum incipit.

243. Vulgate deus.

244. Last abbreviated word (“m” with vertical “i” above) is in right margin, lighter color, as in line 5 above. The “m” looks like Aldred’s insular gloss “m.”

Four Collects for St. Cuthbert [a-d]²⁵¹

245. Title in red, dark gloss.

246. End of this line and one above, fade into the right margin; similar ink issues to lines 5 and 8 below. In line 13, “tem” is faint, but could be wear. In line 14, hard to read after “d” of abbreviated dominum. The “d” is Aldred, but there are some added letters after that in a fainter ink.

247. Note that this last line of the title, a stock phrase, is left unglossed. Note also the mixture of two different styles of “d” in these texts, some the open top, others not.

248. Half line left blank; appears to be an erasure.

249. A lot of wear down in the bottom and right margin, near the trough; relying on Lind. for some final words and gloss, which he also was unable to read fully. Possibly this page was worn more because of use on the facing page, 84r with the Cuthbert collects and colophon.

250. Last word squeezed in small.

251. For comparison, see Fulda Sacramentary 41, p. 31: [a] is identical except for omission of facias at

Aldred; minuscule, new writing stint;²⁵² unglossed; two column with blank lines between prayers; untitled; four large initials.²⁵³

252. Letters are smaller, thinner nib, tighter overall; right column is a bit darker and a wider nib than the left.

253. Initials are unusual in shape and may have been done after the prayers or modeled on an exemplar.

254. Lind. has sempiterne, but it looks like an "æ" at the end, with the "a" partially erased and a dot below it.

255. Notice spelling of Cuthbert's name here in line 6 with "th" but below in line 19, spelling with "d" as it is in the next two collects in column b.

256. Hole made from the other side by Scribe E's erasure (fol. 84v10) mars the "r."

257. Lind. notes (220) that Aldred "seems to have omitted facias" before precibus. See Fulda Sacramentary, 31.

258. Some evidence of stray ink marks toward the gutter; possible erasure, but could be other reasons for discoloration in this space.

259. Lind. notes (220) that Aldred has saluti instead of sorte saluati, and references John Lingard, The History and Antiquities of the Anglo-Saxon Church (London, 1845), vol. 2, 365.

260. In this last line of the second Cuthbert collect in the first column, somewhat worn, the descenders of the "s" in gloriosi and "p" of per extend down far, touching almost the barely legible memorandum. Lind. thinks the latter was erased before the Cuthbert text was added.

261. Right upper corner damaged, almost transparent with letters from the verso showing through even in the facsimile.

Antiphons, versicles, and responsories for the first four Sundays in Advent, incomplete.²⁶³

Scribe E, one column, unglossed; starts at the very top and leaves little in the way of margins on the sides, top, or bottom, and squeezes the last word on, as if he only had this page available.

263. Thompson, Rituale, xi, specifies for Matins (night office) and Lauds on the first three Sundays in Advent but that the fourth Sunday is only partial.

264. Damage to upper left corner with staining.

265. Isaiah 30:27.

266. The second numeral “I” is tall with a horizontal top and appears to be added in the space between ui and Ecce. The color of the “ui” is slightly lighter, like the abbreviation mark over “dni,” whereas the “dni” and the periods on either side of “ui” are darker. Thus the final “I” of “ui” (7) may be an addition, possibly an insertion mark, or a correction to indicate the first Sunday in Advent.

267. Ezechiel 17:12. Tolhurst, Hyde Abbey, vol. 1, fo. 3v has ecce rex tuus veniet as part of the antiphon for 1st Sunday Advent Lauds gospel reading (e.g. Your king comes . . .). See Tolhurst, Hyde Abbey, vol. 1, fo. 9v, 3rd Sunday in Advent, third day, Matins inuitatorium.

268. R: Aspiciens a longe through V: Tollite portas in line 3 are in Tolhurst, Hyde Abbey, vol. 1, fo. 4v under 1st Sunday of Advent, Matins, first Nocturn, first reading.

269. R: Aspiciebam is found in Tolhurst, Hyde Abbey, vol. 1, fo. 4v under 1st Sunday in Advent, Matins, 1st Nocturn, second reading. The U: Ecce dominator is found in Tolhurst, Hyde Abbey, vol. 1, fo. 3v, 1st Sunday in Advent, 3rd Nocturn, reading 12 and fo. 10, 3rd Sunday in Advent, Matins, 1st Nocturn, reading 3; cf. Isaiah 10:30.

270. R: Missus est gabriel and U: Aue Maria are in Tolhurst, Hyde Abbey, vol. 1, fo. 4v under 1st Sunday in Advent, Matins, 1st Nocturn, third reading.

271. R: Aue Maria in Tolhurst, Hyde Abbey, vol. 1, fol. 2, 1st Sunday in Advent, 1st Nocturn, reading 4, but different versicle after. Here in line 5, U: Tollite portas repeats from earlier.

272. R: Saluatorem in Tolhurst, Hyde Abbey, vol. 1, fo. 2v, 1st Sunday in Advent, 2nd Nocturn, reading 7 responsory, but different versicle after. Here it is followed by U: Preocupemus (not found in Tolhurst).

273. R: Audite uerbum in Tolhurst, Hyde Abbey, vol. 1, fo. 3, 1st Sunday in Advent, 3rd Nocturns, reading 9 responsory, but different versicle after. Here, U: A solis ortu (not found in Tolhurst).

274. No abbreviation mark over con but after it (con-); Lind. has concipient. R: Ecce uirgo concipiet (Is. 7:14 and in Gospels) in Tolhurst, Hyde Abbey, vol. 1, fo. 3, 1st Sunday in Advent, 3rd Nocturns, reading 10; different versicle follows. Here, U: Tollite repeats from earlier.

276. R: Lætentur celi in Tolhurst, Hyde Abbey, vol. 1, fo. 3v, 1st Sunday in Advent, 3rd Nocturn, reading 12, followed as here by U: Ecce dominator.

277. Lind. starts a new section with In laudibus. From here through line 10 ending with Ecce ueniet profeta is the first Sunday in Advent Lauds (Tolhurst, Hyde Abbey, vol. 1, fo. 3v) all of the antiphons, but no psalms; Tolhurst entry has the psalms, as well as the chapter reading, hymn, and further versicles, responsories, and oratio that follow in the service. Here it is unclear if what follows this section is starting 2nd Sunday in Advent; note line 11 Ne timeas maria below.

278. Most of the antiphon A's are cap tall inverted v-shaped, but a few appear as lower case style, either a or a.

279. Space for a few characters between profeta. and U'. First an erasure of what appears to be an A (antiphon), then a space where there is a small cut, a hole right before the U'. The cap A with a dot after it is also erased, but no sign of an erased abbreviation mark above it. On the recto, this cut mars the word (fol. 84ra7 mirabi-) at the "r." E erased his mistaken "A" but also accidentally tore a hole, then resumed with U'. Like the erasure marks, the cut is angled right (l) with a bit of a hook at the bottom or scrap edge of vellum, possibly scraping with his right hand. No sign of ink on the cut (if it had been done with the nib). The edge of the cut shows edges under more to the recto than the verso.

296. Not found in Tolhurst; A: beata est maria is found in Tolhurst, Hyde Abbey, vol. 1, fo. 15v (later in Advent Terce, but an antiphon found elsewhere).

297. Above the III is a small “a.” Lind. starts a new section here. This begins 3rd Sunday in Advent.

305. R: Descendet dominus in Tolhurst, Hyde Abbey, vol. 1, fo. 10, 3rd Sunday in Advent, Matins, 2nd Nocturn, reading 7; different versicle follows (Ecce dominus ueniet). Here, U: Exion (ex sion?) used above.

306. R: Ueni domine in Tolhurst, Hyde Abbey, vol. 1, fo. 10v, 3rd Sunday in Advent, Matins, 2nd Nocturn, reading 10; different versicle follows. Here, U: A solis ortu again.

307. R: Docebit nos cannot find in Tolhurst in this sequence.

308. Lind. starts a new section with In laudibus. See Tolhurst, Hyde Abbey, vol. 1, fo. 11, 3rd Sunday in Advent, Lauds from here through line 31 A: Iohannes autem. A: Tu es qui uenturus es after it not identified in Tolhurst in this sequence.

309. Hard to read; appears to be a “Q” with a “u” above it, then an “r,” then “ta” slightly lower and to the right of the “Q.” All lighter brown. Lind. starts new section with Quarta, 4th Sunday in Advent. For the next two lines, Tolhurst’s source is missing a page and picks up with versicle for reading 2 of Nocturns; match with here begins below on line 34.

310. R: Canite tuba in sion in Tolhurst, Hyde Abbey, vol. 1, fo. 14, 4th Sunday in Advent, Lauds antiphon.

³¹¹. R: Non auferetur sceptrum in Tolhurst, Hyde Abbey, vol. 1, fo. 13, 4th Sunday in Advent, Matins, Nocturn 1, reading 4; V: pulchriores sunt follows as here.

³¹². Have not found this R and its U in Tolhurst.

³¹³. This last half line, and the beginning of lines 34–35 have suffered wear. The word plenitudo is divided, with the “do” below. R: Ecce iam uenit plenitudo found in Tolhurst, Hyde Abbey, vol. 1, fol. 14v, 4th week in Advent, 2nd day, Lauds Antiphon.

³¹⁴. T. J. Brown, Durham Ritual, 51; Thompson, Rituale, xi, xix–xx; W. J. P. Boyd, “Aldrediana XXV: Ritual Hebraica,” English Philological Studies 14 (1975): 39–45.

³¹⁵. Some smearing of the red, affecting fol. 84v as well. On fol. 85r upper right corner, a V shaped patch; serious staining that affects the whole ms but is clearly worse in the later quires (as if something soaked the corner from the bottom up). On fol. 85r upper right corner appears to be marginalia but it may be ink bleed from 84v. Also in right margin of fol. 85r between lines 12–17, may be some very faint marginal text or has been scraped.

³¹⁶. Title in red, unglossed; “as” of last word written above “at” of predestinat. For what follows (Lind. only has the unabbreviated word with the gloss above it), I have put the abbreviated word as abbreviated, using the tilde that closely matches the abbreviation sign used throughout (except in a few cases, as noted, or where an equivalent typeset character exists). I have placed it after the letter over which it occurs or between two letters over which it occurs. The unabbreviated word follows, but where those include ending abbreviations, I have added the missing letter in italics, as done with earlier text; for OE I have used, like Lind., an apostrophe to indicate an abbreviation mark in an OE word. With the Latin, periods occur between words, sometimes with space on either side, sometimes closer to the beginning of the next word. I have left spaces around all periods, since that seems to be the predominant pattern.

³¹⁷. Note lack of alternate. Lind. notes, 220, that Stevenson has gestir, but Lind. rejects that reading. The Durham Ritual Glossary has giscir and only this instance. Also, a preexisting cut or crack runs through here (right end of a column, lines from lines 2–4, although it does not go all the way through at the top; as if something cut it from this side rather than the other). Aldred has avoided writing where this cut is. The vel symbol is right before this cut. In line 3, he has glossed ecnvng with the “g” falling after the cut. Also, near the cut, below it, runs a vertical light line that seems to mark the right edge of the “a” column, visible to at least lines 13 or 14. A similar line runs along the right edge of column “b” as well, but it is double parallel lines about a ¼ inch apart. The rest of the folios do not appear to have vertical ruling of this type.

318. Close approximation of this abbreviation mark, which looks like a backward C or close parens, subscripted. The one in the next line is lower case “c” with a similar curved mark. In Lindenbrog, p. 289, the abbreviation sign itself (somewhat resembling a long comma or a close parens) is the symbol for con while a more hooked version is the sign for contra; in neither case is it preceded by a “c” as here with contra. Capelli does not have anything similar.

319. The prefix “en” is added in front and angling up, seemingly afterward. The “e” is hard to distinguish in relation to the “c” with some extra mark in front of the “e.” Looks almost like an ampersand. Lind. has “en contra.”

320. Interesting gloss (portver not in Durham Ritual Glossary). Ælfric’s Glossary (ed. Zupitza, p. 318) has for civis, ceastergewara oððe portman. Bosworth and Toller list portwara as citizen in several locations.

321. Lind., 220, notes “sic,” should be crimen.

322. The first of the two “s”s may have been added after the “e” of confesus.

323. Appears to be a hook on this abbreviation mark, something like a 7.

324. Dark stain over the “d” of “dm~” matched by a similar blot of dark material on fol. 84v31, so a later spill of some kind.

325. The “d” is very open with a small horizontal abbreviation mark above, different from the tilde abbreviation mark above the “d” in the next word, dicit.

326. This abbreviation looks like a large wide “N” open at the top with a minim in its bowl. Essentially, the “N” looks like a backwards 4 open at the top, with the extender going below the line. See fol. 85vb line 3.

327. Space in the middle of fuerit between the “e” and the “r.” No evidence of an erasure, but a horizontal line extends from the “e” toward the “r” across the space and some smudging appears below. Perhaps he started to write fuet and then corrected.

328. End of word (“iens”) squeezed in small at end of line, actually in the zone of the parallel lines marking the edge of the column. This is the first time he has violated the column mark; when he does it again in lines below, he squeezes less, but never transgresses the second, right line. This still leaves considerable margin space in the ms.

329. Gloss is to the right of the word, split into two lines (beren/de).

330. This “f” with abbreviation mark above looks the same as the one in the previous line for fundis.331. Unclear why there is a tilde mark above the “t” of frater.

332. Note personal name, transliterated in the gloss.

333. This G- does not look appreciably different than the one in the previous line. Note also that the Latin gauisetus seems odd: the participle gavibus from gaudere can hardly be declined with an extra “-et” in it. Lindenbrog, does not have gavibus, gauisetus or gaudere, although gaudium abbreviated “G.” occurs in the Notae Papianae (Keil, Grammatici latini, iv, p. 320).

334. Stain on the “h” and period before it.

335. Note he does not use the dæg rune.

336. “h” followed by a small minim superscript.

337. “h” followed with one dot above and one beside.

338. A first letter is unclear in this corner, due to staining. To the right of the v-shaped patch, it looks like a lower case “h” with a small “c” above it (possibly in red); but if so, there is then no word identifying it, since the next item is the “hc-” abbreviation followed by hunc. It may have been an alternate abbreviation.

339. Some of these glosses, including this one, are very faint. The red ink has faded or blurred. Possibly damp.

340. Double minims crossed through with one horizontal stroke.

341. No gloss readable, but faint red staining evident; Lind. p. 220 note, suggests æ.

342. Thin lines above and below the word, indicating recognition of an error for the abbreviation for mitti, not misa (noted by Lind., 220). Line 17 has manu misa glossed honde gesendeð. The Lindenbrog. list has both together “mn- m” for manumitti and “mm- s” for manu missus. Note also the periods between the two words, where normally the periods are between sets.

343. An “a” inserted above, over erasure of an “i” (narrow minim).

344. Here again a period between two words that define a single abbreviation preceding them.

345. The “a” appears below the “m”; apparently forgot the letter, as there is no evidence of erasure.

346. A crack or slice in the page center near the beginning of the b lines extends downward from line 2 to line 4; Aldred has worked around it, indenting these lines to avoid it (lines 3-4 are indented more than 2). It is visible on the recto as well and seems to have been sliced from that side.

347. Lind., 220, corrects to ne. After the “o” of no, there appears to be very faint “2” shaped mark, very thin nib. Doesn’t really make it an “e” though.

348. Abbreviation mark looks like an elevated dot attached by a line to the “n.”

349. Similar to fol. 85rb line 6 for enim, wide open N with a minim “i” inserted in its bowl, but also a subscript and very small “a” under its right leg (for hominus?). No parallel in Lindenbrog. or Capelli. See nihil in line 5 below.350. Lind. changes to mæge; there appears to be a dot above the “h” indicating an error.

351. Abbreviation mark above the “n,” looks like a number seven.

352. Lind. has gedæfnað, but it clearly has a crossed “d.”

353. Same “N” as above, but with first leg crossed diagonally in upper part.

355. Abbreviated: p-p p~ (crossed p).

356. Unable to reproduce these standard “p” abbreviations. “p/” has a slash through the “p.” “,p” has the left tail extender. In the next line, “p_” is a crossed “p.”

357. The “prouincia” is crowded into the right margin.

358. The “q” has a tail that circles around to cross its extender.

359. The abbreviation “qn~” from line 22 is here also abbreviated as quo with a line over the “o”; Lind does not unabbreviate. End of this line has space, but rather than add the next abbreviation, he has lengthened the “e” of quem into the “m” and then left two dots and space.

361. The first abbreviation, for qua, “q” with a line over it, also has a thin slash through the bottom extender. The second abbreviation, for quam, is a “q” with both a line over it and a clear line through the extender.

362. The “i” inserted between and above, possibly a corrected error rather than an abbreviation.

363. The we biddas gloss assumes “qs” is an abbreviation for quaesumus, not quasi, which the following swæ appears to correct (DOE notes we biddas in the gloss is of quaesumus). See discussion in chapter 5.

364. Two apparent abbreviations for qui. See discussion in chapter 5.

365. Lind. has p' p'te as the gloss of quod, but in the ms, the p'te is over the next Latin abbreviation, leaving considerable space, albeit with a “q” extender from the line above in the way.

366. This line has “q” with a line over it for que, “q” with a diagonal s-curved line through its extender for quod, and then “q” with a curving line swinging to right and down crossing through the extender for questio.

367. Lind. notes that the smudge above this word is “ea” correcting the “æ.” The “a” of the ash is a bit faint; “ea” is clear above it.

368. The “r” has a thin slash mark above it.

369. Another “r” with a slash through it.

370. Unclear why the switch with res to aeh instead of ðing.

371. This abbreviation looks like double “s” but the second “s” has a curved “o” flourish in front of it and a long mark over it.

372. An “s” with a minim above it.

373. The “lice” is written below because the gloss ran over into the margin (he started it above the middle of the Latin word, rather than near its beginning).

374. The “s” has a line horizontal line crossing its lower extender.

375. This second “i” is a minim over the second “s.”

376. The “c” is over the “t.”

377. A “t” with a line over it and a thin slash through it.

378. A “t” with the top horizontal line ending in a curve upward on the right, like a curly single end-quote.

379. Very smudged and faint red before ðriga, could be bleeding of the red gloss from elsewhere.

380. A “t” with a large comma after it.

381. The “o” above the “t.”

382. Note tempus here twice.

383. The “o” above the “u.”

384. Faint red smudges above, may be an erased gloss or just red bleeding from elsewhere.

386. This abbreviation has been added above the period, and squeezed in (dark ink). Gloss of previous word goes above it (thus gloss was done after the Latin).

387. See Boyd, "Aldrediana XXV," 39–45.

388. No sign of an abbreviation mark above it, but some kind of wide scrape made by a square-ended or angled instrument.

389. T. J. Brown, Durham Ritual, 51; Thompson, Rituale, xi.

390. Faint brown letters visible on many of the last few pages, not a palimpsest but facing page offset due to damp. See for example fol. 86v between the columns; fol. 86va23 last blank half line; blank section in fol. 87vb bottom.

391. The "e" of "de" is clear, very close to "q" of quibus, but the "d" is not very visible, although the area is faint (not much room for the "d," squeezed in or added later). Pondera appears to be accusative plural following de rather than ponderibus. Pondera in line 12 is presumably nominative plural, glossed with Old English nominative or accusative plural pundo for punda.

392. The title lines (10–11) in red ink. Line 11 is indented, after possible scraping or erasure.

393. Note change in spelling for aworden from a win to a "v." The Durham Ritual Glossary, p. 90, lists auordēd as a gloss of fieri; DOE aworpan headword, lists it as a Northumbrian usage of weorpan to gloss Latin passive with a past participle, with of course all references to Aldred's handiwork; in non-Northumbrian usage, aworpan has a negative sense, to be worthless. From the DOE list, it appears that win is his norm, especially in the Lindisfarne gloss, but that occasionally in the Durham Ritual he uses "v" or once, "u." Although unlikely, Aldred's use of "v" for "win" could be a grammatical response to factus at the end of a line break, before seeing the est on the next line.

395. The “u” is added above the “i” as a correction.

396. The “e” added as correction above.

397. Again, est not abbreviated, maybe because it is at the end of a page. See line 15 above.

398. This page, especially the first column, shows a lot of wear and is faint in places, making the gloss particularly difficult to read. The left margin, near line 7–10, has some faint stray marks, possibly erased text in brown. One dark mark to the left of line 7, like an angled arrow, may be a later mark.

399. This alternative is presented in the margin at the beginning of line 2, next to mentium, written small on two lines. See discussion in chapter 5.

400. The inde est is repeated, with gloss, from bottom of previous page. Gloss in this corner is very faded. Note that the instances of est are not abbreviated in the rest of this text, but the abbreviation appears again in the two questions that follow.

401. Note vel without alternative.

403. Abbreviation for enim is two minims crossed through with one stroke, not the abbreviation used in the notae above, fol. 85rb6.

404. Some appearance of a partially erased letter between de and igne.

405. “Tell me why the two breaths are not equal. Therefore one is hot and the other is cold. It is that the one is of fire and the other is of wind. And this signifies that from these are made the spirit.”

406. Note that both times he spells out seraphin in the gloss, repeating the Latin.

407. In the notae, fol. 85rb1 has “dr-” abbreviation for dicitur.

408. “Tell me whence the wind blows. It is from the seraphim, hence it is said seraphim of the winds.”

413. The “t” and abbreviation mark are red.

414. The “st” unclear, similar to p. 135, l.16 above on partibus. This line a bit crowded.

415. The “i” of “Si” squeezed in.

416. An “oz” written above this number.

417. “A” inserted above, perhaps because he forgot to leave space for addition of red letter later.

Hill, McMaster Old English Studies and Texts 1 (Toronto, 1982), 26, 67–68: *Tell me the substance from which Adam, the first man, was made. I tell you, from eight pounds' weight. Tell me what they are called. I tell you, the first was a pound of earth from which his flesh was made. The second was a pound of fire; from this his blood was red and hot. The third was a pound of wind; from this his breath was given; the fourth was a pound of cloud; from this his instability of mind was given. The fifth was a pound of grace; from this was given his understanding and thought. The sixth was a pound of blossoms; from this was given the variety of his eyes. ⁴²¹. The title, beginning on the second half of line 16 with De digni-, is in red and continues up to the end of line 18, where the final "e" of impe- is brown ink. Line 18 (Imperator qui . . .) starts with an enlarged capital "I" that extends upward to line 17 and below almost to line 19. Lind. renders the title just De dignitatibus romanorum (lines 16–17).

422. Note absence of alternative for vel; also vel with alternative in next line.

423. He ends the column on the half line, rather than starting the next item in the list, Patricius.

424. Note use of vel plus an alternative. This runs into the margin, with heretoga below “-roefa” and beside Comes; heretoga breaks after the “o” (in the gutter) with the “-ga” below. Several of the glosses run deep into the gutter.

425. Runs into the margin, with latuv below and beside Centu.

426. The “q” is oddly formed, with a zigzag opening, similar to line 13 below, a capital “Q.”

427. This vel alternate runs into the margin and breaks twice to run three lines; the last word is thus beside the gloss to line 12 and has a wiggly line under it separating it from the Latin word of line 12. Also, this last word, latuva, has been corrected to insert the “v” (more like a sloppy “u”).

428. He has gone to great trouble to squeeze strynde in because it runs into the merged descender of the “s” in line 11 and the ascender of “b” in tribui, on the other side of which is the overrun gloss from line 11. The “-nde” is below the “y,” with the “-de” on the other side of the merged s-descender and b-ascender.

429. Runs into the margin, with half the word below, faint and into the gutter.

430. Lind. notes second letter is not clear. Probably an “e” but looks somewhat like an “o.”

431. Bosworth and Toller note that Aldred seems to have taken decurio as two words in megscire (megscir).

432. Note translation of Christ here to gecoreno, chosen, rather than his usual transliteration of Christ as crist. The Durham Ritual Glossary shows other uses of gecoren-, as for example, election.

433. Boyd, “Aldrediana XXV,” 45, says “the Latin is wrong in form and mostly wrong in substance” and proceeds to analyze the Hebrew words for king, of which this use is very limited. On the OE gloss, Boyd (46–47) calls it “an accurate paraphrase.”

434. Boyd, “Aldrediana XXV,” 47, discusses this gloss of Pharaoh in relation to Greek and Latin as well as Egyptian history, concluding that “the Latin and its gloss are fully intelligible from the Biblical tradition.”

435. The gloss runs into the margin, but is faint and in the gutter. Lind. has 7 ricsa's which he thinks stands for ricsaras, also listed as ricsares in the Durham Ritual Glossary.

436. Lind. does not have cuiu and says the Latin is illegible. The et abbreviation and cuiu is faint and in the gutter.

437. Boyd, “Aldrediana XXV,” 47, sees this Latin use of antiochi for Syrian kings as “an intelligible mistake,” taking a common proper name of the Seleucid dynasty of Syrian kings (Antiochus) as the title king. He also notes, though, that Aldred’s gloss of “each king” captures the more accurate sense that each king had this proper name.

438. Boyd, “Aldrediana XXV,” 48, tracks the possible source of this word as Persian for king (which is actually šar), probably a personal name mistaken for the title, as with Syrian antiochi. He posits Philip Ar-rhidaeus or a corruption of Darius.

444. On fol. 87, angled cut along the bottom appears to be original, leaving a mark on fol. 86v; ruling on fol. 87v with 25 rather than 23 lines in column a, appears to be closer lines starting from next text beginning fol. 87vaI6; blank lines fol. 87vb16–25 and letters from later scribe there; blank area has faint lettering from offset.

445. Title in red up through the H of Hostiarius. The rest of the Roman numerals in this section are brown ink with red boxes drawn around them.

446. Isidore (PL 83:794) and Pseudo-Alcuin (PL 101: 1232) have ianitores from Ezra 2:42.

447. An “i” added as correction.

448. A phrase found under deacon, Amalarius 7 (PL 105: 825)

449. The “a” is a correction above an “e;” Lind. notes the correction from feboderes.

450. Isaiah 58:1, “Cry out, do not cease.” See Isidore (PL 83:791) and Pseudo-Alcuin (PL 101: 1232).

451. Number added in left margin, surrounded by a red line drawn box.

452. Raban Maur (PL 107:304) is the only one who has Josephus in this sentence.

453. The “h” (which Lind. omits) has two dots over and below to indicate the error.

454. This gloss line at the top of the column is faint; same with line 2.

455. Solomon also is referenced in Isidore (PL 83:793) and Pseudo-Alcuin (PL 101: 1232).

456. Unable to read after vnder- because of heavy staining on this and the next line. The glosses for lines 3 and 4 run into the margin and may be on two lines each.

457. Lind. notes this is probably for “hypo.”

458. Hypodiaconus, see Isidore (PL 83: 790) and Raban Maur (PL 107: 303-04).

459. Lind. notes that the compound ðegnvng men' should gloss nathinnaei rather than ezra and refers to Ezra 2:43 and Neh. 11:21 (see also 1 Chron. 9:2); as used by Isidore (PL 83: 790) and Pseudo-Alcuin (PL 101: 1232). The word is translated temple servants in more modern English translations, but the King James has Nethinim, following the Vulgate (Nathinæi). See below, Isidore and Boyd, “Aldrediana XXV,” 49–50.

460. See Boyd, “Aldrediana VII,” 14–16.

461. Also Isidore (PL 83: 789) and Pseudo-Alcuin (PL 101: 1232) under Levitarum. Possibly this got lumped in or came out of Diaconus.

462. Corrected above the “i” with a “by” to make presbyter.

463. Any references to Hebrew tradition ends here.

464. A dot over the "s" indicating error (Lind. has epi).

465. Superinspectores is in Bede (PL 92: 986A) and Nicolaus I (PL 119: 973A).

466. This ".l." with a tilde over it is not recorded by Lind. It is in dark ink, not the light ink used for the numbers, as appears in the next line (viii). Is could be either the number 1000 or the abbreviation for id est.

467. This number is in brown ink but red circled rather than with a square around it like the others.

468. This column has 25 lines, unlike the preceding double column folios consistently having 23. No evidence of ruling. Folio 87 is also cut along the bottom at an angle, causing a mark on fol. 86.

469. This numeral and the next ("x." on line 5) are in the margin, in brown ink, and without boxes or lines around them. Also note on this page two errors that Lind. notes with sic! This page ends with room on it, blank lines in column b (except for some later stray letters?), yet he ran to 25 rather than 23 lines in column a.

470. Pseudo-Alcuin, PL 101: 1236 and also 1233.

Interpretation of sacred names (Interpretatio nominis sacerdotum)⁴⁷⁸
Aldred, minuscule; double column, glossed.⁴⁷⁹

471. Unclear why Chorepiscopus comes after the Pontifex; see Isidore, as noted below.

472. Lind. has constituti, but the ms clearly has a reduplicating ti that is not corrected.

473. The letters are spread out between the abbreviation marks for non and per. The “æ” is hard to see. The OE gloss no is on the next line.

474. Note use of vel with an alternative word.

475. Although there is 1/3 of a line still available, he starts the last office of pope on a fresh line.

476. This may complement Pontifex.

477. Lind. has oedles; Durham Ritual Glossary lists under oeðel, however the crossed line for “eth” is not visible.

478. T. J. Brown, Durham Ritual, p. 51, separates into two texts, fol. 87va16–87vb1 and fol. 87bv2–15 (explanation of eight Greek words); Thompson, Rituale, p. xi treats all of it as continuous from the previous text on ecclesiastical grades.

479. Closer lines allow him to run to 25 lines in column a, although he ends up with plenty of room that he leaves empty at the bottom of column b. This text seems to have more errors and be messier, notable on the previous page as well. The next folio, 88r, starts a fresh writing campaign.

480. Title in red, not glossed. The “tv” with an abbreviation mark over it is below, next to the OE gloss of line 17. Lind. has put tum after nomine in line 17.

481. Lind. notes sic.

482. Lind. has ða ða but there are two “eths” at the beginning.

483. No visible abbreviation mark; Lind. has presbiteri.

484. Lind. has nuncupati but it looks like an “e.”

485. Lind. notes it should be nominantur.

486. Lind. leaves like this; but the abbreviation used here and below, “.g. 7 l.” is used to indicate Greek and Latin, spelled out in the previous text.

487. Note the gloss of Hebrew abba with the Latin pater rather than OE fæder. See Boyd, “Aldrediana XXV,” 50–51, who compares it to Lindisfarne glosses. He notes that Aldred may have decided to make the difference from the previous line clear by using pater instead of fæder. He also notes Aldred’s ignorance of the difference between Hebrew and Aramaic that Jerome notes in regards to abba.

488. Note addition of “g” in this OE gloss spelling of Greek.

489. Final “s” running into the gutter, as does gloss.

490. Runs into gutter; “de” below.

491. Accoluthus (Greek akolouthos, ἀκόλουθος, follower, light bearer) for Latin acolytus, acolyte. Note that the gloss uses the same word abbreviated, transferred into OE. See also Bosworth and Toller and DOE under acolitus, citing Ælfric's Letters (1 and 2).

492. Note use of a tilde over the “g” abbreviation of Greek here.

493. Note the absence of “in latin” (.l.) although there is space for it and the gloss is there for it.

494. Note here and in line 15, idiosyncratic abbreviations for id est. Compare to fol. 86v^a and 14, with a standard “.i.” Here he uses “.i.” followed by the abbreviation sign for est (division sign with curve mark above). Then in line 14, he spells out id followed by the est abbreviation.

495. Lind. notes sic.

496. These last two items, epiphania and ypapante, do not seem to be from the same type of list of names or titles. That may account for the different abbreviation of Latin in lines 12 and 14: he is copying from a different source.

497. Note anomalous use of “la” with a tilde over the “a” for latine. Also in line 14, he abbreviates to “lat” with a tilde over the “a.”

498. Deep into gutter, last letters not quite visible: gæn-geong glossing obviatio meaning to meet up against; oppose, resist; gigegnað glossing obviare at fol. 22rⁱ is only instance of gegennian in Bosworth and Toller.

499. Lind. notes this is equivalent to obviatio.

500. A scooped letter, “u” or “i,” has been inserted in dark ink between the “i” and “s” of plebis. Grammar: antiqui plebis is genitive singular; aldo folcum may be dative plural.

506. The “y” is added above, at an angle.

507. Whole line of gloss very faint.

508. Beatus is glossed with ðe instead of se.

509. Gloss runs into margin broken into two lines below. Note space-saving change to abbreviated Beatus and requiescit in this and subsequent entries.

510. Dots under the “u” and “a” and a small “o” added above the “u” to make eropo, as Lind. has it.

511. Ending of Philip continued here, with a line marking it off from this line.

512. This gloss is to the right in the margin, to avoid the line setting off frigia.

513. As with frigia above, this name is below and set off by a line around it. However, the line, brown ink, jiggles around the gloss of line 21, so he drew it after he glossed. Thus the possible sequence of his work: He did the Latin in brown, then the gloss in red, then went back with brown and drew the line.

514. The abbreviation mark is unclear, occurring over the “vs.” hierv'soa. Presumably this is an abbreviation for Jerusalem, but the ending with “a” is odd. On line 24 below, although unclear, the city is abbreviated hiervsa’ and at fol. 88rb8 hiervs.’ The gloss in each case abbreviates to hierv.’

515. Abbreviation is a tall “.i.” with a macron over it.

⁵¹⁶. In this last, added, line the Latin is smaller, worn, and hard to read.

⁵¹⁷. T. J. Brown, Durham Ritual, 51; Thompson, Rituale, xi, xx.

⁵¹⁸. Very worn, hard to be sure of line breaks and abbreviations; this transcription relies on Lind. for most of the Latin and all of the gloss.

⁵¹⁹. Lind. note, more than likely feover.

⁵²⁰. The alphabet letters are in the left column, in brown ink and are surrounded by a red box or other shape. The “.a.” is either missing or under the dark stain in the upper left corner.

⁵²¹. Lind. corrects to gevðe.

530. Note spelling of rod here with an “h” and “a” ending; compare to lines 11 (rod) and 14 (rode) below, all glossing crucem; cf. Lindisfarne gloss to Mark 15:30. It could be an aspiration due to the preceding word, Christ; at lines 11 and 14 rod(e) follows ðerh, ending in “h.”

531. Lind. notes first two letters indistinct.

532. See Boyd, “Aldrediana XXV,” 55–56, who works out the etymological twists that lie behind the idea of strength in Raguel and Satahel.

533. Lind. notes beginning of word indistinct.

534. Note midline start of next letter, because of line overrun, either because he worried about running out of room or does not like to go to three lines on any entry.

535. Lind. does not have id est, but there appears to be an “i” in the margin toward the gutter.

56. fol. 89 (Binding sheet)

Northumbrian lectionary fragment, 8th century⁵⁴²

Half sheet, cut and quarter turned

Later pen trials at top of fol. 89r and 89v (upside down).

538. T. J. Brown, Durham Ritual, 51; Thompson, Rituale, xi.

539. Very worn, so this transcription relied on Lind. for most of the Latin and all of the gloss.

540. Lind. corrects to gecyniso.

541. Lind. does not have, but can see some numbers (presumably for Gospel of John).

542. T. J. Brown, Durham Ritual, 36–37; see also Lowe, CLA 2, no. 151, who describes the page as “thick and greasy.”

fol. 89r top:

ab ab.

Dns' sal . . . t hon⁵⁴³

fol. 89v top

a tres. specie ðrie megulitas æ abcdefg æ æ⁵⁴⁴

543. Note dot under “t” of sal. .t. Copy of line from fol. 75v bottom (QIX/X.23M1) addition by Scribe Mi honoring Bishop Aldhun (Dns salu& honor& am& aldhunu antistitem) in Caroline script.

544. Dots under “cie” of specie, “e” of ðrie, “as” of megulitas. Ker, Catalogue, 145, suggests a possible date in the tenth century. Note similarity of the “g” to the abcedarial pen trial on fol. 764 bottom, although other letters differ.
